One winter's evening towards the close of the year 1900, or within a year or two of that time, a young medical practitioner recently established in business, was scated by a cheerful fire in his little parlor, listening to the wind which was beating the ram in pattering drops against the window, and rumbling dismally in the chimner. The night was wet and cold; he had been walking through med and water the whole day, and now was comfortably reposing in his dressing-gown and slippers, more than half askeep and less than half awake, revolving a thousand matters in his wandering imagination. First he thought how had the wind was blowing and how the cold, sharp rain would be at that moment beating in his face if he were not comfortably housed at Lone. Then his mind reverted to his annual Christmas t' at to his native place and dearest friends; he thought if he were not comfortably housed at Lone. Then his mind reverted to his annual Christmas and to his native place and dearest friends; he thought how glad they would all be to see him, and how happy it would make Rose, if he could only tell her that he had got a patient at last, and hoped to have more, and to come down in a few months into and marry her, and take her home to gladine in his lonely fireside, and stimulate him to fresh ertions. Then he began to wonder when his most ration would appear, or whether he was destined, by a special dispensation of Providence, ever no have any patients at all; and then he glat about Rose again, and dropped to sleep dreamed about her, till the very tone of her est merry voice sounded in his ears, and her at tiny hand rested on his shoulder.

There was a hand upon his shoulder, but it was neither soft nor tiny; its owner being a corpulent, cound-headed boy, who, in consideration of the am of one shilling per week and his food, was let out by the parish to carry medicine and message. As there was no demand for the one, however, and no necessity for the other, he usually occupied his unemployed hours—averaging fourteen a day—in abstracting pepperment drops, taking sained nourishment and going to sleep.

"A lady, sir—a lady!" whispered the boy, notsing his finater with a shake.

"What lady?" cried our friend, starting up, not quite certain that his dream was an illusion, and half expecting that it might be Rose herself.

"What lady?" where."

"There, sir," replied the boy, pointing to the not quite centain that his dream was an illusion, and half expecting that it might be Rose herself.

"What lady? where?"

"There, Sr." replied the boy, pointing to the gless door leading into the surgery, with an expression of alarm which the very unusual apparation of a customer might have tended to excite.

The surgeon locked towards the door, and started himself for an instant on beholding the appearance of his unlooked for visitor.

It was a singularly tall female, dressed in deep rooming, and standing so close to the door that her face almost touched the glass. The upper part of her person was, direfully muitted in a black shawl as if for the purpose of concealment, and her five was shrouded by a thick black well. She stood perfectly erect; her figure was drawn up to its full height, and though the surgeon felt that the oves beneath the vell were fixed on him, she stood perfectly motionless, and evinced, by no gesture whatever, the slightest conciousness of his having turned towards her.

Do you wish to consult me? he inquired with some hesitation holding open the door. It opened inwards, and therefore the action did not after the position of the figure, which still remained motionless on the same spot.

The female slightly inclined her head, in tokon res on the same spot.

The female slightly inclined her head, in tokon of acquiescence.

Pray walk in,' said the surgeon. 'Pray walk in,' said the surgeon.

The figure moved a step forward; and then turning its head in the direction of the boy—to his infinite horror—appeared to hesitate.

'Leave the room, Tom.' said the young man, addressing the boy, whose large round eyes had been extended to their utmost width, during this brief interview. 'Draw the curtain and shut the door."

The boy drew a green cuntain across the glass part of the door, retired into the surgery, closed the door after him, and immediately applied one of his large eyes to the key-hole on the other ide.
The surgeon drew a chair to the fire, and me

" You are very wet," he said.
"Yam," said the stimuger, in a deep low voice.
"And you are ill?" redded the singson com-passionately, for the tone was that of a person in evere pain.
"I nin," was the reply, "very ill; not bodily, but montally. It was not for myself, or on my blaif," continued the stranger, "that I came to you—if I labored under bodily disease I should yon—if I labored under bodily disease I should not be out alone at such an hour, or on such a night as this; and if I were afflicted with it 24 hours heree, Go. I nows how gladly I would lie down and pray to die. It is for another that I beseech your aid, sir. I may be mad to ask it for him—I think I am; but night after night through the long dreary hours of watching, and the holders of licenses have pledged through the long dreary hours of watching, and wesping, the thought has been ever present to my mind; and the I see the hopelessness of human assistance availing him, the bare thought of laying him in the grave without it, makes my blood run cold !!!

And a shudder, such as the surgeon well knew ort could not produce, trembled thro' the speaker's ne. There was a desperate cornestness in this wo-

"If," he sold, rising hastily, "the person of whom you speak be in so hopeless a condition as you describe, not a moment is to be lost. I will go with you instantly. Why did you not obtain medical advice before?

"Because it would have been useless before—because it is useless even now," replied the woman, clasping her hands possionately. The surgeon gazed for a moment on the black will, as if to ascertain the expression of the features benefith it; its thickness, however, readered such a result impossible.

beneith it; its thickness, however, readered such a result impossible.

"You are ill," he said, gently, "although you do not know it. The fover which has enabled you to bear without feeling the fatigue which you have oridently undergone, is burning within you now. Fut that to your lips," he continued, pouring out a glass of water—"compose yourself for a few minutes, and then tell me as calmly as you can what the disease of the patient is, and how long he has been ill. The moment I know what it is necessary I should know, to render my visits serviceable to him, I am rendy to accompany you."

The stranger litted the glass of water to her mouth without missing the veil, put it down untasted, and burst into tears.
"I know," she said sobbing alond, "that what "I know," she said sobbing atom, "that what I say to you now seems like the rayings of fever, I have been told so before, less kindly than by you. I am not a young woman, sir; they do say, that as life streams on towards its final close, the last short termant, worthless as it may seem to all heside, is dearer to its passessor than all the years that have gone before, connected the they be with the recollection of old triends long since be with the recollection of old friends long since dead, and young ones, children, perhaps—who have fallen of from, and largetten one as completely as if they had died too. My natural term of life cannot be many years longer, and should be dearer to me on that account; but I would lay it down without a sigh—with the cruhees—with joy—if what I tell you now were only false or imaginary. To-morrow morning, be of whom I speak will be, I know, though I would fain think otherwise, beyond the reach of human aid; yet, to-

I am unwilling to increase your distuess, said the surgeon, after a short pance, by making any comment on what you have just said, or appearing desirous to investigate a subject you seem so anxious to conceal; but there is an inconsistency in your statement which I cannot reconcile with probability. This person is dying to-night, and I cannot see him when my assistance might possibly avail; you apprehend it will be useless to-morrow and yet you would have me see him then. If he be indeed as dear to you as your words and toanner would imply, why not try to save his life before delay, and the progress of his disease renders it impracticable?

ted a great deal and to very little purpose on the possible circumstances of the case. In common with the generality of people, he had often heard and read of singular instances, in which a presentiment of death at a particular day or even manute had been entertained and realized. At one moment he was inclined to think that the present might be such a case, but then it occurred to him that all the anecdotes he had ever heard very tearly area of peoples who had been troubled.

curred to him that all the anecdotes he had ever heard, were of persons who had here troubled with a foreboding of finer own death.

This woman, however, spoke of another person—a man; and it was impossible to suppose that a mere dream, or delusion of fancy would induce her to speak of his approaching dispolution with such terrible certainty as she had done. It could not be that the man was to be mundered in the mouning, and that the woman, originally a consenting party and bound to secreey by an oath, had relented, and, though unable to prevent the commission of some outrage on the victim. had determined to ted, and, though unable to prevent the commission of ome outrage on the victim han determined to prevent his death, if possible, by the timely interposition of medical aid. The idea of such a thing imppening within two miles of the metropolis appeared too wild and preposterous to be entertained beyond the instant. Then his original impression tint the woman's intellects were disordered recurred; and as it was the only mode of solving the difficulty with any degree of satisfaction, he obstinately made up his mind to believe she was mad. Certain microrings upon this point, however, stole upon his thoughts at the time, and presented themselves again and again through the long, dull course of a sleepless night, during which despite of all his effects to the contrary, he was unable to banish the black veil from his distmbed imagination.

RUFUS KING & CO. OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY

A HAPPY NEW YEAR : To the readers of the Sentinel, as to our friends and fellow-citizens generally, we cordially tender the genial greeting of the season, "A Happy New Year!" Printers are strict Holiday keepers and te shall therefore close our Office to-day, and issue no paper to-morrow. Our Carriers will wait upon our City subscribers during the day with their New Year's Address. We bespeak for them a friendly welcome.

Ennor.-In our statement of the Imports vester day, the number of barrels of whiskey is put down at 33,252. This is altogethen too large a story, and the blame must be laid to the types. The real amount is 3,259 bbls.

Outrage on Law at Milwaukee. The city of Milwaukee has long since carned the range of the State of Milwaukee," because of the swaggering airs she has assumed towards the rest of the State, and the open, undisgnised and violent subversion of the laws, which has often marked her erratic career.

We have just received the account of another high handed disregard of the license law, by the passage of a resolution, in the Common Council, directing the repayment of all monies received for liquor licenses, and permitting all, who choose, to sell without license.

This is a new and unheard of violation of law. If the Milwaukee Councilmen are not satisfied with the law, let them go to the Legislature and obtain its repeal in a legal manner; but it is extremely farcient to witness such a mode of administering law by its sworn expounders, and administrators.

Mixed with a grain of truth in the above article ant least a bushel of misrepresentations. So far s the act of the Council referred to is concerned the Specialor has learned before this time that it was notconsummated, and is not likely to be. We have italicised a line in the second paragraph which is all false. The Council passed no resolution, permitting the sale without license, at the meeting referred to, or at any other time. At their conviction after thir trial, let them inform the publie. Neither the District Attorney, or the Marshal, are to blame, if we are to believe the letters unnished to us for publication. Then, where is the trouble ? As to the talk about the "swaggering airs" assamed by our city towards the rest of the state. we can easily excuse such trifling stuff in these times, when no exchanges come on for a fortnight. Our northern friend must fill his paper with some thing.

THE MAILS-THE MAILS-No mail again vesterday, beyond Chicago! If any one of our readers has ever tried to make up a daily paper for two weeks without exchanges, he will conceive comething of the annoyances to which we are subject.

Some delay we can account for and excu-e, a the time of changing mails from boat to stage, but when it comes to such a pass that papers and leaters are detained three weeks between New York and this city, the state of things becomes posttively insufferable. Thirteen days ago, the negligence of the Dunkirk postmaster was discovered, yet up to this time not a paper or letter, of those accumulated under the supervision of that distin-guished officer, has reached this city. This would make his majority over Upham of $300 to the Treasmy of the Asylum.

Another Pringes Route-Messis, Baldwin and De Forest, Americans, have made proposals to the government of Costa Rica, for the monopoe for 30 years, of a route across the Isthmus-They propose to establish a line of steamers from San Juan del Norte or Grevtown to Sarapiqui, a town some 60 miles from San Juan on the nyer Sarapiqui, which empties into the river San Juan on the south. From Sarapiqui they propose to open roads across the country to the capital and other principal towns. They also propose to carry the mails and all agents and despatches of the Government free of cost, and to pay into the treasury 10 per cent, of all the net profits of the

She could do nothing more to her credit. The Back Mans Coung.-We harn that an extra stage left Chicago for Milwaukee, yesterday torning, loaded up, no doubt, with a portion of the long missing mails. the ladder upon their shoulders (as they fad prac-tised it the night before). He was just able to touch it with the point of his foot. He got on the ladder and they lowered it upon their arms Here his overcost was caught between the ladder and the wall. This was his most unpleasant moment. Every instant he expected to hear the alarm and receive the fire of the Sentinel. from which the above cut was taken. By it we can take the exact shape, and unorangly fit the most irregular heads. Many can testify to the insorvenionce, and annoyance; and actual pain they are subjected to, in breaking in Hats that will not fit them. By this ingenious contrivance, this very great annoyance is done away; as the Hats are made to fit perfectly the first time.

Another great advantage is, by keeping a copy of the impression, we can at all times fit our customers from all parts of the country.

We invite all who desire a perfect fit in a Hat, to call and leave an impression of their head; an iall those who take pleasure in witnessing the inventions of this curious instrument.

Having adopted the Cash System (which all will readily acknowledge to be the beat,) we are enabled to sell the best silk Hat made, at the extreme low price of $4.25; curpassing any $5 llat sold in this city. Our Hats are all manufactured by our elves, and in offering them to our customers, we do so, with the confident assurance, they are all we recommend them to be, we invite all who do not wish to pay two profits upon a Hat, and are willing to save 25 per cent, to call and see us.
